THE PLANET

SATURDAY, - - July 12, 1890.

Petersburg Blues, Capt. W. H.
Johnson, 2nd Battalion, Norfolk,
Va., commanded by Capt. E. W.
Gould. The troops arrived in the morning and were met at the Union
Depot by Capt. W. A. Hankins, commanding Attucks Guards and Lieut.

R. Beecher, Taylor, commanding guest R. Beecher Taylor, commanding Carney Guards. The Battalion Band was present and played sev-eral choice selections. The soldiers were escorted to the Armory, where they were entertained by the soldiers of the 1st Battalion.

The line of march for the scene of battle was begun about 1 p. m., under command of Capt. C. B. Nicholas. The Battalion Band headed the line. On arriving at the Exposition Grounds the men were ordered to stack arms and were allowed to break ranks, with orders to assemble again at 5 o'cleck p. m. When the appointed hour arrived the drum was heard sounding the roll-call, and soldiers were seen coming from all directions and falling into line. The forces were arranged in the following division:

lowing division:

1st Bat. Capt. C. B. Nicholas; Co. C., Capt. W. T. Edwards; Co. B., Lieut. R. Beecher Taylor; Petersburg Blues, Capt. W. H. Johnson.
2nd Battallion, Capt. E. W. Gould: Co. A., Richmond, Capt. W. A. Hankins: Co. A., Norfolk, Lieut.——; Co. D., Norfolk, Capt. W. H. Sheppard. Capt. C. B. Nicholas, commanding the First Battalion, occupied the position on the northern side of the race course, near the ern side of the race course, near the stables, while Capt. Gould, with the Second Battalion, was stationed near the southern portion of the tic, Va. called on us.

Soon after positions were taken, the pickets began to play their part: creeping from both sides, sometimes walking, then crawling; moving about, trying to get into good positions. Finally, after approaching sufficiently near, they began to fire, time in the country July 15th, with and very soon the firing was general. the 2nd Baptist Church S. S. Capt. W. A. Hankins formed a line of skirmishers on one side, Lieut. R. Beecher Taylor one on the other side. They advanced towards each other. The skirmishers behaved admirably well on both sides, and de serve great credit. The line of skirmishers advanced cautiously, as if in real war. The large crowd gazing on in admiration and silence. After approaching within 50 yards of each other, the skirmishers began to fire and continued to advance, Capt. W. A. Hankins forcing the opposite line of skirmishers so closely and rapidly that Lieut, R. Beecher Taylor was obliged to retreat, but he Capt. Nicholas was forming a line on one side and Capt. Gould on the other. The main-lines commencing to advance, the skirmishers begun to fall back and form with the mainline. Capt. Nicholas commanded the Attucks Guards, and firing returned the fire, advancing slowly, for the summer.

The firing became general along the line, but the men showed much courage and the officers displayed much presence of mind.

Capt. Gould made a flank move ment from his left on Capt. Nicholas right, but was repulsed. The left of Capt. Nicholas' line retreated, and
